As important as writing is to most of us in any discipline, it is also often one of the hardest things we do. If you're like me, you may find that you procrastinate when given a writing assignment, and you may find it hard to complete longer writing projects.

This retreat is intended to address these difficulties by working with issues of motivation and control of writing. We'll work with "mindfulness" practices, including non-sectarian meditation and mindful movement, in order to help facilitate greater focus. Each day will include periods of yoga, meditation, and relaxed, mindful writing. Our intention will be to cultivate writing with greater comfort and fluency.

Faculty Writing Retreat

July 12-13, 2012
The Frederick Hotel,
Boonville, MO

Cost $200

(Includes night hotel stay, food for both days, and other expenses)

Sign up by June 15 at cwp.missouri.edu
under "Events."

At this retreat participants may work on any writing they choose. We have a block of rooms available, meeting space, and opportunities to work with professional editors.

The schedule will include optional activities to explore and experience some of Boonville's history and attractions, including meals at Glenn's Café, bike rides or walks on the Katy Trail, a winery tour, etc.

The Campus Writing Program is helping pay for some of the event costs. If faculty do not have available funds to attend, please contact Amy Lannin, CWP Director, to request additional support.
